call it truth or principle, if you please, instead of doctrine or dogma; and what its essential ideas are is stated by Mr. Henry. "All grow, out of one root truth, the fatherhood of God." "It was their grasp of the Incarnation as the ground fact of their own being that transformed the hearts and minds of the disciples, and made them speak of their Lord as the first bern of the law of human action; but once the truth of righteousness changes from an outward, regulative law to an inward, constitutive law. To an inward, constitutive law. To an invalidation in the constitutive law in the subject, which has been silently working on the subject, which has been silently working the subject, which has been silently working the subject. it is to act according to our will. Since the spirit-in which we are is one in nature with the Spirit whose we are, the service of God is freedom. In its obedience to God the spirit is the law unto tself, and autonomy, not anarchy, is freedom.

This is all very true, and very well put-almost as well as it was put by the Apostle Paul, who first among merely human beings announced these ideas and put them into the definite shape which he called doctrine.

the company tolls how it is done:

It is reacted in a superboard air chamber, which allows no contact of fisms or fanl with the body, while all the gasex and volatile products of the combustion are completely reguested and rendered innecess and obstract before being liberated in the air. An approved modern creinatory, he said, might be created in Madisans' square, and, but for transporting the dead heights thirther, would not be an offence to any use. The propers is accommanded by through the Westminster period to the present day.

As nearly as we can discover, the "New Theology," so much of it as least as is constructive, consists not so much a new truth, or new views of truth, as in a realization, which is new to its adrocates, perhaps, of the reason ablences, of the adaptation to all classes of men and to all periods of time, and of the immense and to all periods of time, and of the immense uplifting and regenerative appritual force, of the doortries—call them principles, root-truths, ground-facts, if you prefer—of Christianity, if this be the truth in regard to the "New Theology," it is a good thing, and all good men should bid it God-epeed. It will not supplant or destroy the old, but revive and enforce it.
